

JOE NJOROGÉ
INTERIM PRESIDENT AND CEO

JOE NJOROGÉ Interim President and Chief Executive Officer. After serving the Food Bank of South Jersey for more than 10 years as Chief Operating Officer/CFO, Joe has been selected by the FBSJ Board of Trustees to serve as Interim President and CEO. Joe is charged with sharing his vision for how the organization will advance through 2018 and beyond. His vision for the FBSJ is to get back to its core strengths of food distribution, health and wellness, and purposeful partnerships.

In all of these areas, Joe intends to conservatively provide the services South Jersey families need most while finding innovative ways to deliver on those promises. During his time as Interim President and CEO, Joe will also ensure all daily operations run smoothly and in compliance with expectations from a variety of stakeholders.

Joe will also represent the interests of the organization in various business and professional forums. He works closely with the Board of Trustees and leadership team to create long-term strategic goals that ensure the sustainability and continued growth of the organization through effective and efficient stewardship and management.

Joe has spent most of his professional life in non-profit management. He graduated from Eastern University with a M.S. in Global Economic Development and Accounting. He is a member of the Institute of Management Accountants (IMA) and has served on the Technology Innovation Committee of Feeding America.

Joe has received several recognitions for his service including being featured as one of the top CFO's by South Jersey Biz magazine. He has also been noted as a Man Of The Year in Business Leadership by South Jersey Magazine. Joe has also been recognized by the New Jersey Department of Agriculture as Top Tomato because of his continued efforts to ensure that nutritious health local produce is made available to everyone in the communities.
